

Digitally Transforming Your Audit Program to Meet a New Compliance View

written by Lauri Moon | January 25, 2021

With a new US government set to take office, a more aggressive enforcement approach from health & safety regulators may be just around the corner. For employers looking to reduce their business risk, achieving regulatory compliance starts with a strong, sustainable audit program. But with COVID-19 restrictions still in place, many organizations are facing new barriers that may impede how they assess compliance and limit their potential exposure. A digital transformation of your health & safety audit strategy, however, may be the first step to help you keep your business on the right side of the law.

Join Cority's Sean Baldry, CRSP as he explores how a digital reimagination of your organization's audit program can offer new, exciting opportunities in compliance management, especially in an ever-evolving post-pandemic workplace. In this session, we'll cover:

- Why audits are so essential to your organizations' compliance strategy, and why they often falter
- How to create an audit program in the digital landscape to ensure success
- The emerging world of virtual audits and its potential lasting impacts
