

Fostering & Sustaining a Healthy Culture in a Hybrid Workforce

written by Lauri Moon | September 3, 2021

As companies calibrate the balance between remote and in-office work, company cultures may be facing their greatest challenge in generations.

Temporary work-from-home policies are maturing into more permanent hybrid work models with some mix of at-home and at-office schedules. 2/3's of those employees that have been working at home during the pandemic want to continue to do so; 1/3 of those same employees say they will quit if forced to return to a central office to work. They've seen that remote work can work and do not want to return to having a daily commute which they view as a waste of time.

Many of the elements that defined a company's culture just a few years ago are much less effective today. The hybrid workplace requires a new approach for fostering and sustaining a healthy company culture.

Join Dr. Bob Nelson and Mario Tamayo as they share the 5 most important elements of fostering and sustaining any company culture in a hybrid work environment—and how you can ensure your team is productive, collaborative, and connected no matter where they are—or when they work.

You'll discover:

- What the heck does hybrid mean anyways?
- The rise and fall of the proverbial water cooler—and where connections are made today
- The 5 most important factors for a healthy hybrid workforce
- Why inclusion matters more than ever before
- How to build relationships and maximize your team in a virtual world
- Technology's role in the future of workplace culture
