

How Manufacturers Can Tackle the Talent Shortage

written by Lauri Moon | October 11, 2022

With national unemployment rates at all-time lows, businesses are having to dedicate lots of resources toward hiring. That problem only grows larger in the manufacturing industry, where a high percentage of workers require specialized skills to perform their jobs. And as the pool of eligible jobseekers shrinks over the next decade, these staffing issues will continue to persist.

Staff Shortage

Join this webinar, sponsored by Oracle NetSuite, as they dive into strategies that can help manufacturers overcome the talent shortage in both the short-term and long-term.

In this webinar, we will discuss:

1. Reasons for the current labor shortage and longer-term outlook on the state of the talent gap
2. Short-term and long-term strategies manufacturers can employ to overcome hiring challenges
3. Reasons for optimism and long-term growth prospects for the manufacturing industry as a whole
