

Manufacturing PA Innovation Program

written by Lauri Moon | August 7, 2019

With nearly $3 million available, the Pennsylvania Department of Community and Economic Development's (PA DCED) Manufacturing PA Innovation Program will be accepting applications this fall. This new initiative supports manufacturing research collaborations between all accredited Pennsylvania colleges-universities and manufacturers.

Manufacturers that have an idea for a project to address a technical challenge or develop a new technology may receive assistance in identifying a faculty member at a Pennsylvania university/college to collaborate with on a proposal.

This webinar will provide more detail about the program, the application process and how to make connections with Pennsylvania universities/colleges.
