

Navigating the World of Regulation and Compliance

written by Lauri Moon | June 7, 2017

It's a zero-tolerance world where mandates are firm, regulations are strictly enforced, and a single misstep can mean disastrous fines, lost contracts, or costly recalls.

Whether it's emission standards, safety standards, or labels on food, manufacturers face numerous twists and turns on the compliance journey. Technology provides the direction, the guideposts, and tools to keep manufacturers, like you, on the straight and narrow. But, do you know where to start?

Join us as a panel of industry experts discusses today's complex world of regulations, compliance, and tips for navigating with confidence.

- Erik Glavich, Director of Legal and Regulatory Policy at the National Association of Manufacturers (NAM) will discuss what's on the horizon for government mandates and the recent move to lighten federal mandates.
- Giovanni Martini, CFO of Auricchio, a highly respected cheese producer in Europe, will discuss traceability, quality control, and labeling issues.
- Mike Edgett, Infor Industry & Solution Strategy Director, will wrap up with ways technology can manage complexity and make compliance smooth sailing.

Erik Glavich
Director, Legal and Regulatory Policy
National Association of Manufacturers

Erik Glavich is the Director of Legal and Regulatory Policy at the National Association of Manufacturers. He advocates for an improved federal regulatory system and reforming the regulatory process to minimize the unnecessary burdens that agencies impose. Glavich also represents the interests of manufacturers in the fields of civil justice reform, product safety, agriculture and food and beverage-related issues. He previously served as a staffer for the Regulatory Affairs Subcommittee of the House Committee on Government Reform and as a legislative aide for Congresswoman Candice Miller (R-MI-10). A Michigan native, Glavich received a Master of Public Policy from Georgetown University and graduated from the University of Michigan with a degree in education.
