

Effect of Low Unemployment on OSHA Complaints & Investigations

written by Lauri Moon | October 16, 2018

he stock market is at historic levels, the economy is booming, and employees are feeling more secure in their positions. With increased job security and the availability of other employment, however, employees feel more comfortable filing complaints with OSHA regarding health and safety concerns at workplaces. This webinar will address the effects of the effects of the healthy economy on OSHA complaints and inspections.

Topics covered will include:

- Background on current economic conditions and OSHA enforcement actions
- How OSHA investigations begin
- Employee protections for filing whistleblower complaints
- How to manage employees who have made occupational safety and health complaints
- The effect of the gig economy on OSHA compliance, including the role of temporary workers

Register

By clicking above, I acknowledge and agree to Informa's Terms of Service and to Informa's use of my contact information to communicate with me about offerings by Informa, its brands, affiliates and/or third-party partners, consistent with Informa's Privacy Policy. In addition, I understand that my personal information will be shared with any sponsor(s) of the resource, so they can contact me directly about their products or services. Please refer to the privacy policies of such sponsor(s) for more details on how your information will be used by them.