

Webinar: Next-Generation Distribution & Channel Management for Manufacturers

written by Lauri Moon | May 17, 2018

Distribution, logistics and channel management are more challenging than ever, as globalization and digitization transform supply chains around the world. The competitive landscape is undergoing radical change, driven by omnichannel selling and buying habits and new customer expectations, from shopping to buying to delivery. Traditional sales and fulfillment practices — with inventory dedicated by channel and the movement of goods from dedicated stores and warehouses — are outdated and unable to keep up. Emerging trends include new modes of delivery (drones, delivery to vehicles, etc.) and multi-use locations (drop-off, pick-up, drive-through, store, and showroom combined), underpinned by new processes and workflows, new skills/talent, and technology-empowered intelligence.

In Next-Generation Distribution and Channel Management for Manufacturers, executives will learn what they need to survive and thrive from Manufacturing Performance Institute CEO John Brandt, including:

- Which key performance metrics matter today vs. industry peers —to understand which strategies, best practices and new technologies are helping competitors to gain market advantage.
- Which new trends and technologies are likely to reshape their distribution channels tomorrow.
- How to strategize, invest, and manage differently for a more profitable future.

Don't miss this chance to improve your company's productivity and profitability!
