

Your ESG Journey - how to get started

written by Lauri Moon | April 29, 2022

Organizations are coming under increasing pressure to take action on Environmental, Social and Governance (ESG) concerns. Stakeholders including investors, policy makers, regulators, customers, consumers and employees are making ESG a priority. This can present many challenges depending on what ESG-related practices they have already considered and implemented.

For those organizations at an early stage, it will be crucial to establish a robust foundation in understanding ESG issues for the business and the steps needed to make effective progress in managing the most significant issues to reduce and minimize any negative impacts while promoting the benefits of an effective program.

But what does this mean to your organization?

Join SGS for our next webinar to learn:

- What are your drivers for understanding more about ESG?
- What role are EHS professionals expected to take in their organization's ESG initiatives?
- Where are you now on your ESG journey?
- What are the initial steps you should take to form a solid ESG foundation?
- Examples of best practice - a case study
